

Lockdown

Lockdown was a time of misery.

We couldn't visit our friends in the park or go to clubs,

Everyone longed to go to the cinema and see the latest release,

Stadiums were silent and there was hardly any traffic,

Schools were closed so the children couldn't learn,

Building sites were shut so structures were half complete looking like ruins.

But think about all of the positive experiences,

There's wildlife roaming around,

You would spend more time with your family even if you had fights from time to time,

You could go on walks in the woods and see the nature that you wouldn't have the time to see on a normal day,

Even though you couldn't see your friends you could talk to them on your phone,

Or if you're a gamer you could play games with them online,

You could play board games with your family either in the house or make a call with your whole family and participate in a quiz.

So do you think that lockdown was really a time of misery?

By Connor Martin